How to use this guide:

Time in port and time to go ashore is limited for seafarers and so we produce this guide to give you the basic information where you can find facilities and assistance that are available to you as a seafarer. We can give here the minimum details necessary for you to be able to contact the Seafarers Centre or welfare worker. We have given contact details, opening times and facilities available. Telephone numbers are printed with the country code included.

As you will know there are many places in the world who call themselves 'Seaman's Club' which are commercial businesses. These are not listed in this book as we include only centres that are members of the International Committee on Seafarers Welfare (ICSW) the International Christian Maritime Association (ICMA) or a bona-fide welfare centre who have an agreement to operate their centres for the welfare of seafarers not for themselves. We hope that any charges for their facilities are reasonable and that you will use them when you can and support them as they support you.

We have included as many places as possible. The details have been checked as at late 2009 / early 2010. However, we may have missed some places and facilities which seafarers should know about and we are very sorry for any such omissions and if they are reported to us we will include them in future editions. If you find that details are not correct, or wish to comment or add to the list of facilities within this guide, please send a message to us either by email on:

seafarersdirectory@icsw.org.uk

or through the service of seafarerhelp, which can be contacted free of charge by seafarers from many countries on the telephone numbers printed opposite.

Please mention the ICSW Seafarers Centres Directory when you call.

Whatever the problem, call SeafarerHelp

SeafarerHelp's global presence is a vital addition to existing maritime welfare services. Established in the UK by the International Seafarers Assistance Network (ISAN), seafarers can call SeafarerHelp wherever they are, about any problem, and in any language. The SeafarerHelp service is available 24 hours a day, 365 days a year. In addition to our freephone we can now be contacted by SMS and email. The SeafarerHelp website also provides a LiveChat facility for instant help.

HIV DOESN'T DISCRIMINATE.

Keep yourself and your partner safe - choose to wear a condom and practice safe sex.

This public health message is provided to you by the Global Partnership on HIV and Mobile Workers in the Maritime Sector. The Global Partnership aims to prevent HIV among seafarers through increasing education about HIV, enhancing access to HIV information and services and improving advocacy on behalf of the maritime sector.
